Denson Resident Commits Suicide

A verdict of suicide was rendered Tuesday in the death of John Yoshida, 23, Japanese-American resident of the Jerome Relocation center whose body was found on the Missouri Pacific Railroad's main line between the center and Hudspeth Tuesday morning.

Formerly a resident of Santa Anita, Cal., the boy was found decapitated by J. W. Womack, section foreman. Apparently the boy placed himself on the track before an approaching train. A note left indicated that he contemplated taking his life.

He left his home Sunday and members of his family reported to the administration Monday that he was missing. A search was begun and his body was found Tuesday. The boy lived with his father and step-mother at the center.
